Unified English Braille was developed by the International Council on English Braille to unify the braille symbols used in literary, mathematics and computing contexts. It was ratified in 2004 and is now used in many countries around the world, including Australia, Botswana, Canada, Fiji, Ghana, India, Ireland, Kiribati, Malaysia, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, New Zealand, Nigeria, Papua New Guinea, the United Kingdom, the United Kingdom, the United Kingdom, the United States of America, Vanuatu, Vietnam and Zimbabwe. ICEB continues to monitor the use of UEB and clarify or review its symbols and rules as necessary. Rules of Unified English Braille is the definitive UEB Rulebook produced by ICEB. Hard copies are available for purchase from RNIB in print and braille at an affordable price. The electronic files are available below for free download and can be printed or embossed for personal use. The PDF version is designed for printing. See: Rules of Unified English Braille 2013 (linked).pdf. The braille edition of the UEB Rulebook, in six volumes, is available as formatted braille (BRF) files with page size 25 lines by 30 cells: Rules of Unified English Braille 2013 vol 2.brf - Sections 3-8) Rules of Unified English Braille 2013 vol 2.brf - Sections 9-10 Rules of Unified English Braille 2013 vol 4.brf -Sections 11-16 Rules of Unified English Braille 2013 vol 5.brf - Appendices 1 [shortforms list] and 2 [word list] Rules of Unified English Braille 2013-Translated into French.pdf. There are several new examples. The new rules can be downloaded below: Rules of UEB section 7.6 Quotation marks, apostrophe (PDF) - recommended for print readers Rules of UEB section 7.6 Quotation marks, apostrophe (BRF) - recommended for use with a refreshable braille display Rules of UEB section 7.6 Quotation marks, apostrophe (Word) - available for use with a screen reader 10.12.2 Error in brailling of example (Change as of March 15, 2017) The lower groupsign for "ea" is not used in and is followed by space before the text of the following column. Use of the line indicator within tables is not mandatory and should be determined according to the format guidelines of the producing agency or braille authority. Other methods for separating columns in braille are also permissible. Example: Child BrendaRoseLaura Sept.16,1952 word unsaid has been added to the List. Guidelines for Technical Material This guidelines document was first produced in October 2008 by the Maths Focus Group, a subgroup of the former UEB Rules Committee during the UEB development phase. The purpose of this document was to give transcribers enough information and examples to produce Mathematics, Science and Computer notation in Unified English Braille. In August 2014, a new version was produced to correct errors in the first edition. Hard copies of the 2014 version are available for purchase from RNIB in print and braille. Electronic versions are available for free download in print or braille. Changes in the use of technical symbols that have been approved by the ICEB Executive are also listed below. In all files, each math example is followed by a verbalization enclosed in quotation marks. Print readers are advised to use the PDF file because many versions of Word will not properly show the math symbols. The Word file is accessible for those who wish to use a screen reader. A braille display will provide optimum reading. 3. Signs of Operation and Comparison Approved October 2018. This is the first completed section of the revised Guidelines for Technical Material (GTM). GTM 3. Signs of Operation and Comparison (PDF) - recommended for use with a braille display. It is formatted with with 30 cells per line and 25 lines per page. GTM 3. Example: ABCD EFGH .: "" LEB training and resource materials ICEB has compiled a list of UEB training and resource materials available for free from its member countries. UEB History In April 2004, the ICEB General Assembly declared Unified English Braille to be substantially complete and that it could be recognized as an international standard and considered for adoption by individual countries, the ICEB Executive, at its July 2010 meeting, determined that the development phase was complete and replaced the development project with a UEB Maintenance Committee. UEB has now been adopted in all seven member countries of the ICEB. Some of the documents pertinent to the research phase of the project, as listed in UEBC Research Project Information -especially the final committee reports presented at the 2004 General Assembly -- are useful as background information as to how UEB was developed and why certain decisions were made. However, the documents listed on this page provide the most up-to-date information about UEB and in particular, the Rulebook should be considered definitive.
